THE LADIES OF THE WRITE

The present is an era of kindly senti-ment and, as one token of it, we are happy to observe in more than one journal pleasaut notices of the late lady of the White House. Mrs. Grant seems to retire from a position of great responsibility with the b-st wishes of all who above b-r.
Undoubtedly she is not sorry to go. As a good housewife she has not probably found the executive mansion a very con-venient place of abode. All reports con-cur in representing that renowned edition to be in a condition somewhat dilapidated, and setually verging upon the shabby. In tact, for eight years Mrs. Grant has had no house of her own, and has really been at the head of a large of-fice maintained for the use and benefit of the American people. The modest intle structure which she left at Gat-na was doubtless far pleasanter and in a great teal better repair. We are inclined to believe that Mrs. Hayes will also think with some regret of her sing, elegant and commodious Ohio home, as the auction advertisaments say, "with all the modern improvements." We know at least, from her correspondence, that such was the homesick feeling of Mrs. John Adams; who was always longing for the old-fashioned residence, half villa and half farm-house, which she had left in Massachusetts.

Both the ex-President and the President are married men. Several of our Chief Megistrates have not been so fortunate. Mr. Buchanan, for instance, a bachelor of the oldest kind, would have bachelor of the oldest and, would have found his domestic arrangements sorely trying, but for the lact, grace and ele-gance of his niece. Jefferson, when he became President, was still mourning his beautiful wife, too early lost; indeed he never ceased to mourn for her. The charming manners and personal elegance of Mrs. Madison are matters of history, When Mrs. Jackson, in the quiet of the Hermitage, heard of her husband's elec-tion to the Presidency, she said simply: "Well, for the General's sake I am glad; for my part, I never wished it." She was dead soon after; she went to a narrower place than the White House, and it is said the General was never the same man afterward; one of his friends said that he grew twenty years older on the night of her death. Mrs. Tyler came by the accident of death to the White House, and she died there, leaving its domestic arrangements somewhat at hap-hazard for the rest of the official term of her husband. Mrs. Pierce arrived at Washington under the shadow of a great be-reavement, her only child, a fine lad of 13 years, having been killed by a railroad accident the preceding January. Mrs. Filimore, it wis be remembered, died just after her husband went out of office-, and political disappointment and do-nestic grisf clouded his iast official days. We have not mentioned the stately lady of the true aristocratic Virginian blood, who was the wife of Washington, and who will always be remembered with him. She was never the lady of the White House. Of the wives of other Presidents there is little known and nothing of public interest to be said.

We think it creditable to the character American women, and an evidence of their tact and ability gracefully to adapt vives to circumstances, that no President's wife has shown any particu-lar incapacity for the position through want of good breeding and dignified man-ners. Usually all the ladies of the President's house have been respectfully treated by the press and the public, and there has been little scandalous tittletattle about any of them. Two or three of them have been remarkable for a deeply religious character. We are sure that the best wishes of the nation attend the coming of the new mistress of the White House, and that in her hands its traditional dignity and decorum of life will be preserved.—[New York Tribune.

The President has received a confidential letter from a lunatic residing in New Orleans, who desires to come for-ward and thrust himself into the breach of Louisiana affairs and solve for the President and the country the vexed and troublesome Louisiana question. The proposition in cold blood is this: He offers to send Mr. Packard, as he says, to hell by the most direct route, which, being freely translated, reveals an offer to assassinate Mr. Packard. He says in his letter: "Of course I will be arrested. I shall plead guilty, shall be convicted, and as a matter of course sentenced. When this is done all that I ask of you. Mr. President, is that you will simply

JOHN T. HAYMOND'S MANIA

John T. Raymond is very strong as a metcher. He is not averse to a little game of poker or an occasional touch of lansquenet, but his special adoration is matching for money. If he can catch a friend while traveling from place to place, he will match him day and night. He will go off the stage and match until he goes on next night. He will match between the acts. He has now of late invented a system of matching with Willie Deutsch (Florence's manager) by Willie Deutsch (Florence's manager) by telegraph, and he occupies many of his spare moments in this delicate occupa-tion. When he first struck the "Gilded Age" age" he was $15,000 behind, all the result of matching. He paid all this up with his first profits, then bought his wife (Marie Gordon) a carriage and pair, and after that he went to matching again. If he meets a friend on the street, he make him to take a drink and then went asks him to take a drink, and then wants him to match. He will go out with a couple of hundred dollars in his pocket couple of hundred dollars in his pocket in the morning, and roturn in the after-moen for more. It is a manta with him, and is said to eat up a goodly portion of his profits. Last fall, when in San Francisco, Raymond met Maurice Gran on the street, and they went together into the bar-room of the Palace Hotel, Raymond proposed matching. They matched two ten-dollar pieces. Gran won. They doubled it. Gran won. From tens and twenties they went up to bundreds, a streak of luck accompanying bundreds, a streak of luck accompanying Grau all throughout. From bundreds they soon got to thousands. In less than half an hour Raymond lost $32,000. It was on honor, of course, as neither had that amount of money. Raymond was excited and nervous, and proposed matching the whole $32,000 on one Grau consented, put down head. Ray-mond matched him and won. This gave him a lesson for a time, but he was soon days ago Raymond met Gran opposite the Fifth Avenue Hotel. Raymond pulled out $50, Gran had $20, and in five minutes the latter had lost it. By chance he found a five-dollar bill in his pocket, and metched that; he won, and in ten minutes after that he had Raymond's $50 and his own $25 safely stored back in his pocket. That day Grau sent $10 to St. John's Guild. Willie Deutsch is about $1,200 ahead at present in his matching with Raymond.—[New York Dramath Name.] miuntes the latter had lost it. By chance

Bad Medicine.—In the land of the Winnebagos the Big Indian of that war-like tribe sits by the council fire or in the adjacent streets and eats his heart. Dismay, chagrin, despair, anger and apprehension appear on the faces of the braves; for the Big Indian has, in the bitterness of his spirit, made a terrible threat. He has threatened to turn his face to the wall and lie still and make believe that he is dead, and thus to excite the repentance and remorse of an un-grateful people that will not let him bave his own way. 'When your-turn home,' said Push-ma-ta-ba to his companions. "the vont, men will come out to meet you. They will ask you. 'Where is Push-ma-ta-ha?' You will say to them, Push-ma-ta-ha is no more. They will hear this like the sound of the falling of a mighty oak in the stillness of the for-est." And that is just the way that in the Winnebago village they have heard the threat of the Big Indian; for the sense of startied horror, the wonder of what may come next, the conception that a mere earthquake or meteoric shower would be in the nature of an anti-climar -all this overwhelms their thoughts and they have not energy enough left to put their beads in the ashes or to sew on to their waistcoats the buttons bursted off in the first paroxysm of despair and rage. Some insist that the Big Indian should not take on in this way merely because of the bad conduct of Man-Who-Makes-His-Own-Cabinet; but the Big Indian is resolute and will positively die, and the Little Indian will inherit all his property, including the Winnebago village and the seat in the United States Senate.—[New York Herald.

Dramatic News.

MARRIAGE ETIQUETTE.-It is contrary MARRIAGE ETIQUETTE.—It is contrary to custom to invite sucess to the marriage of a widow. If a widower marries a young girl, the etiquette is the same as that of a first marriage. A widow must marry in the morning early, without show, and has only her witnesses and those of her ntended. Her dress must be plain, of quiet color; black, however, is not admissible. On leaving church, the bride invites to breakfast the witnesses who have formed the party, but no other guests are invited to this rebut no other guests are invited to this repast. On the fifteenth day after the marriage, cards are sent bearing the new addresses of the married pair. A widow never makes wedding calls after remarrying. Those who receive the cards do the visiting. There is a month allowed for the return of cards and the visits. When a single lady marries, after having passed the usual age for marriage, the ceremony abould be simple and unobtrusive.—[Demorest's Monthly. but no other guests are invited to this re

Mr. President, is that you will simply pardon me. I, as a high-minded patriot, will perform my part as a simple duty of ridding the country of a miscreant, and at the same time ridding you of any responsibility in deciding which is the lawful Governor of Louisiana."

Walking on Flowers.—The latest at weddings is to have the main aisig thickly stream with flowers. At the marriage of Mr. Millikin to Miss Outhout, in New York last week, the bride walked over a mat, stretched from the door to the altar railing, fashioned of evergreens and filled in by lities, roses and violets.
